

Buying Gifts for a Golfer - Online

Buying a gift for a golfer can be a "dicey" proposition for a non-golfer.

Let's face it... they probably don't know just how fanatical you are about the game. Only another golfer can really relate, and not all your friends are golfers themselves (I hope)

Or, if they are a golfer themselves - maybe they do know. But, how do they know what to get for you? Equipment, lessons, maybe a round of golf at the best club in the area? What's important to you, may not be important to them.

I found a great new online golf gift store where, besides the normal stuff for your bag, your friends can find more unique gifts. Things they won't find in the local pro shop. There are some great personalized items that I know you'd love to have (just drop a hint), and some pretty unique items for your bar or the den.

There are personalized golf balls, including the new Titleist NXT Extreme. Personalized golf ball markers, divot tools, and for anyone who works in an office environment - all manner of golf-themed office accessories.

My all-time favorites are the golf barware, so you can create your own little 19th Hole for entertaining friends. There's even a 19th Hole Bar Sign personalized with your name (How cool is that?)

Besides steering your friends there, you might want to have a look for yourself. After all, who says you can't buy a gift for yourself?

About the Author

Sid Hale is the owner of Gift Envy, LLC and runs several golf-related businesses, including Golf Gift Discovery - an online golf gift store.

Source: <http://GolfArticleSyndication.com>